

Colegio Nacional de Médicos Especialistas en Radiología e Imagen

The National College of Radiologists (Colegio Nacional de Médicos Especialistas en Radiología e Imagen) is the youngest organization in Mexican Radiology. It was founded in September 9th, 2002.

In Mexico, The Colleges of Graduates are the only corporations considered in the Constitution to promote laws and rules regarding the proper matters of its nature. They are formed by 100 or more graduates with a board certification and common in the same medical field.

During decades we have been worried about education in Radiology both the lack of legal and civil representation moved us to create the National College of Radiologists.

The National College of Radiologists is a civil association considered in the Mexican Constitution throughout the Ministry of Education to promote the creation of laws regarding radiological matters.

It is very important to know that the “Colegio Nacional de Médicos Especialistas en Radiología e Imagen” (CNMERI), is a civil association created by members of the SMRI to look out for labor and civil rights and not for academic matters. The actual board of the CNMERI is constituted by members of the SMRI but there are members of all over the country.
